SHROUDED IN MYSTERY.

Fate of Attorney Clinton C. Palmer of Portland Unsolved.

Portland Telegram: Deep mystery surrounds the sudden disappearance of Clinton C. Palmer, a well-known attorney of this city. Although a constant search has been kept up for him since a week ago today, when he was last seen, his whereabouts still remain unknown. His wife and the police have been working on the case night and day, but no clue whatever can be found.

When Palmer disappeared he had about $300 in cash and several safety deposit checks with him. Mrs. Palmer, who is at the comfortable Palmer home at Vermont and Wisconsin streets, believes her husband has met with foul play.

"There is no reason why he should leave his home," she said today. "He never had a better practice than he has at the present time. He was making lots of money, and practically had more business than he could take care of."

When Mr. Palmer left home last Wednesday morning he dropped a statement by which one might be led to believe that he had deserted his wife. What might have happened the day or night before is not known, but Mrs. Palmer says they had no serious trouble. On leaving the home Mr. Palmer said:

"I will not be home for dinner. I do not know whether I will ever be home or not."

He had arranged, however, to take Mrs. Palmer down town that evening and go for a boat ride on the river. Mrs. Palmer said:

"He expected to collect a large sum of money that afternoon. I do not know whether he made the collection, but I expect he did. We never had any serious trouble, and have lived at this pretty home for the past four years. I have done everything possible to find him, but have obtained no clue whatever."

Mr. Palmer had a good practice, and was prospering. When he first came here from New York five years ago, he formed a partnership with Attorney John H. Woodward, but two years later established an office by himself.

Mr. Palmer has a mother residing at Bay City, Wash. It is the belief of some of his friends that he has gone there, but Mrs. Palmer says she has received word from his mother, and that he is not there.
